the season.

Stranger still, women have laughed at Ibsen's "Ghosts." I sat amazed at an afternoon performance of this tragedy to hear sounds of mirth. These outbursts did not stop at siggles. There were explosions—notably when the impudent Regina talked from the shoulder—that caused more serious neighbors of their hillarious slaters to his "S-s-h-h!" I was interested, rather than amused, to find women taking a jolly view of "Upstairs and Down," while men 'Upstairs and Down," while men locked upon the somewhat risque WENT to the Empire Theatre last proceedings with a solemnity born.
